Democracy's Tragedies

The Northwest has been ripped apart for 25 years by repeated reversals of environmental laws. Hasty logging in times of weak regulation lays waste to resources. Periodic bans on logging bankrupt the workers and small businesses. A political pendulum swings; it cuts down forests and species, families and communities.

Old ways of adding up votes fail to represent large groups in many places. In North Carolina, there were enough black voters to fill two election districts. But they were a 25% minority spread over eight districts. So they won no federal representation; for over 100 years they were invisible as voters.

More stories inside . . .

What's Wrong?

Our defective voting rules come from the failure to realize there are different types of election; and these require different methods of voting.

We all know how to decide the simplest sort of issue: A question with only two answers is voted 'yes' or 'no'. For such an issue, the yes and no votes are enough.

But as soon as three candidates run for one office, the situation becomes more complicated. Then a yes-no vote is no longer suitable.

Ethical Benefits of Better Rules

Elections

- Give voters real choices of candidates who can win, by electing fair shares of reps from all major groups. That encourages a wide variety of candidates, discussion of issues, and voter turnout. Ensure minority rights to voting and representation.
- Reduce wasted votes and safe seats. Reduce campaign hysteria, and regional polarization.
- Reduce the effects of spoilers, gerrymanders, and unequal campaign funding.

Legislation

- Give fair representation to all major groups, so the council may enact laws with real majorities.
- Select a moderator with wide appeal to serve as the central swing voter among interest-group advocates.
- Minimize chances and effects of manipulation. Detach poison-pill and free-rider amendments. Reduce policy deadlocks and upheavals.
- Give all reps equal funds for projects and agencies. And make each rep's spending visible to her voters.
