

Why Desire and Build Democracy?

A good democracy develops, improving itself, the quality of our society and our social agreements.

The best rules strengthen some reasons for voting. We will see how ranking choices can speed up meetings.

Democracy tools are powerful means for building social equity and trust, peace and prosperity.

Consider the 1998 Northern Ireland Good Friday Agreement referendum.

The major factions in the RCV election were:

The Catholics who were opposed to the peace deal and for union with the Republic of Ireland.

The Catholics for peace with the Protestants in N. Ireland

The Protestants for peace with the Catholics in N. Ireland

The Protestants who were opposed to the peace deal and for closer ties to the United Kingdom.

In some districts, no faction got a majority. If you wanted peace, who was your second choice?

Some Catholic candidates for peace asked followers to rank to the Protestants for peace above the Catholics opposed to the peace deal. Some Protestants for peace made a similar ask.

Peace won.

RCV helps as it “gives you proportionality on every axis.”

The best tools for democracy raise the levels of social trust, health and happiness.

As the numbers on page 61* show us, to elect reps who enact the best health, education, tax and other policies, a country needs effective voting rules, not wasted votes. The tools also raise the rewards for consensus builders; they reduce polarizing fear, anger and gridlock.

“Democracy is broadly understood to mean ‘rule by the people’.
In practice, it is often defined as people choosing their leaders in free and fair elections.

Other definitions go beyond this. For example, some of them see democracy as people having additional individual rights and being protected from the state.

(It) gives citizens the right to influence important decisions over their own lives and allows them to hold their leaders accountable.

But it can have other benefits too: democratic countries seem better governed than autocracies, seem to grow faster, and foster more peaceful conduct within and between them.”
